to make writing newsletters & blog posts
as easy as filling in the blanks

Template #1: The “List” Article

Ah, the list! This is one of the most popular and easy-to-read articles.

It’s scannable. Readers can quickly + easily find the information they want. And it’s formatted in a way that recaptures your readers attention if she starts to meander off.

Step 1. Article Title

Brainstorm a few “working” article titles.

With list articles, always be sure to use a number in the title!

13 Stats that will make you rethink _____
5 of the Most Powerful _____
3 Myths _____ Doesn't Want You to Know
7 ___ Tricks Real Women Use to _____
5 Reasons Why _____ Works

Step 2. Opening

Write a compelling opening that identifies what the problem or struggle is

Have you ever felt like _____?

Does this sound familiar? _____

I've been getting the same question from all my clients lately: _____?

Step 3. Go into more detail!

Paint the picture of the problem.

Use a story, statistics, or examples. You want the reader to see, hear, taste, and FEEL what it's like to be in the middle of the struggle.

For example...

Don't just say, "Your kids are misbehaving."

Instead, use examples that your clients give you.

Your teens gets home from school at 3:30 and immediately shuts herself in her room. Hours later, you still haven't seen her when you tell her it's time for dinner. Ten minutes (and a round of, "I'm coming's"), later she's finally at the table... but she spends the entire time on her phone.

Don't just say, "You're overwhelmed in your business."

Try something like...

You've had days where you look up to see that it's 2pm, and all you've eaten today was a spoonful of almond butter.

Step 4. Reassure them.

- "You're not alone."
- "I've totally been there."
- "I get it. This used to happen to me all the time."
- "I've seen so many smart women who have the same problem."

Step 5. Transition to the list.

(Let the reader know you're going to show her how to fix that problem.)

Well, good news. I'm going to show you how to _____ in 3 simple steps.

Ready? Let's dive in.

or

That's why I love ____ (whatever you're listing) ____.

Step 6. Write a Header

This is like a new “title” that lets the reader know you’re about to teach the lesson. It also re-catches her eye if she has started skimming instead of reading every line. It tells her, “Hey! This is the important part!”

It can even be the exact same as the actual Title of your article.

*13 Stats that will make you rethink _____
5 of the Most Powerful _____
3 Myths _____ Doesn't Want You to Know
7 _____ Tricks Real Women Use to _____
5 Reasons Why _____ Works*

Step 7. The List!

List out the items, giving each one...

- a “subhead” or bold, short line that says your most important point or key takeaway from that item
- 1-3 short paragraphs that explain that item
- Make sure to organize your list. You can organize it...
 - chronologically
 - from most to least popular
 - alphabetically
 - or step-by-step
 - Be consistent – try to keep each entry about the same length and tone.

1. _____(bolded, mini-title)_____

_____ (describe item 1) _____

2. ____ (bolded, mini-title) ____

____ (describe item 2) ____

Step 8. Transition out of the list

Just give a short line to let them know you're finished with the steps – don't over-complicate this one.

And there you go!

There you have it. 5 of the Most Powerful ____

Step 9. Wrap it up!

Summarize the key takeaways, or emphasize the benefit.

And you know what the best part is?

Next time you _____, you'll be able to _____.

Step 10. Close and Call to Action

Prompt your reader with a question to encourage them to hit reply (or leave a comment, if you're also using this article as a blog post).

Or invite them to find out more about this topic over on your website.

Or invite them to tweet something or come say "hi" on Facebook.

Step 11. Go back to Step 1 and finalize the title of your article.
